

Capital Clean Energy Carriers CEO at Capital Link year LNG webinar – 11 December 2025

December 11, 2025

Jerry Kalogiratos, CEO of Capital Clean Energy Carriers Corp. (NASDAQ: CCEC), was among the speakers at the Capital Link LNG Shipping Sector Webinar discussion – part of a shipping wide discussions with industry leaders ahead of the holiday season.

He provided a positive and robust outlook for LNG shipping operators despite the conflicting tides coming from global gdp trends, geopolitical risk and outlook for commodity prices and Gas / LNG in particular. "Our sector is price agnostic in many ways – what we are focused on is volume and we have clear visibility of 200 million tonnes of new liquefaction capacity that will be added before the end of the decade. Most of this will need to be shipped and using the tried and tested multiplier of requiring 1.5x vessels for every 1 million tonnes of LNG that is transported by ship means we need at least 300 LNG vessels by 2030".

The panel – including senior executives from Flex LNG, Golar LNG and Maran shipping hosted by Mike Webber from Webber Research – focused extensively on the opportunities and threats from existing and potentially new sources of geopolitical risk. Any escalation of US – China tensions was unanimously agreed as the key existing threat but Mr Kalogiratos was keen to point out an ending of the Russia-Ukraine conflict could provide another source of LNG and Gas volumes to be transported. Such a development can be seen emerging from recent discussions and would provide a further boost to LNG volumes over time potentially the CCEC CEO added.

Find the full video of the LNG Shipping webinar - <https://youtu.be/b7w2yKRfJW4>